Distributed by The Weinstein Company, it is a remake of Kim Ji-woon's 2003 horror film Thierry, My Love. It follows a Korean-American man, played by Daniel Henney, who investigates the death of a young woman at a high school. Two days later, the body of the girl's younger sister is found mutilated. Based on the director's own script, the film co-stars S. Jun-ho and No Min-woo. I Saw the Devil is the first Korean film to be released simultaneously in the United States and the UK. The film received positive reviews, with some critics praising the film for its production quality and realistic performances, especially Jun-ho's performance. Anastasia "I Saw the Devil" Subtitles.
